

This is book three of the Brown Eyed Beauties Novella Series. When Philip Carteret discovers that his widowed father is falling victim to a brazen adventuress, he vows to stop at nothing to thwart her plans. What he doesn't count on is falling victim to the scheming minx himself. This novella is a sweet traditional historical romance set in Victorian England and Swabia. The Brown Eyed Beauties Novella Series follow the love affairs of three friends: Marcus Farniente, Harry Cavendish and Philip Carteret. Although characters reappear throughout the series, each novella is a self-contained story and the series need not be read in chronological order. These sweet traditional romances set in Victorian England range from 19,000 to 24,000 words. They contain mild sexual references, antiquated oaths and some passionate kissing. A Most Improper Profession Marcus Farniente must marry for money if he intends to escape being hauled off to debtor's prison. But, just as he reconciled himself to his fate, he meets the lovely Adelaide Strange, who, unfortunately, is just as poor as he is. The Engagement While Harry Cavendish is working up the courage to declare his love to Flora Moreland, he finds out that his friend Philip has gone and gotten engaged to the girl himself. The Accidental Adventuress When Philip Carteret discovers that his widowed father is falling victim to a brazen adventuress, he vows to stop at nothing to thwart her plans. What he doesn't count on is falling victim to the scheming minx himself.
