

La vie de Benvenuto Cellini (1<sup>er</sup> novembre 1500 – 13 février 1571), artiste de la Renaissance, a travers ses œuvres, racontée par un historien de l'Art, Henri Focillon (7 septembre 1881 – 3 mars 1943). Cet historien universitaire, était conservateur du Musée des Beaux-Arts de Lyon, puis successivement enseignant à l'École des Beaux-Arts de Lyon, à la Sorbonne, à l'université de Yale, et au Collège de France. A travers Cellini, dans ce début de XVI<sup>e</sup> siècle, il sait nous expliquer l'environnement des artistes de cette époque, leur apprentissage par des maîtres comme Michel-Ange et l'exemple laissé par les œuvres des « Antiques ». Il nous transporte dans cet univers où seule la passion peut exprimer assez fortement l'amour de l'art pour convaincre les mécènes de l'époque du talent de cet orfèvre sculpteur. Une vie d'artiste semée d'embûches, dangereuse, où rien n'est acquis définitivement, où les blessures, la prison et la mort sont des dangers permanents. Ce livre comporte de nombreuses photographies en couleur et en noir et blanc des œuvres qui sont arrivées jusqu'à nous et leur perfection est témoin des multiples talents et de l'indomptable volonté de Cellini à les réaliser.
