

This practical guide provides a useful overview of the subject, surveying the environmental pressures facing businesses in the UK and abroad and indicating how companies able to demonstrate environmental accountability can gain a significant advantage in certain sectors and markets. The coverage also includes an examination of business attitudes and the willingness of companies to adopt environmental management systems. This guide includes: * the green challenge to business -- pressures on companies to become environmentally accountable, * legislation and policy (UK and Europe), * stewardship and accountability today, including surveys of business attitudes and current environmental reporting practice (UK and Europe), * recent recommendations for change in accounting and reporting practice (UK and international), and * the American experience.
