

After nearly quitting the program on his first day as an intern at County, Dr. Peter Dooley has since transformed into an efficient, skillful, hard-nosed veteran of the hospital. He routinely encounters and treats a multitude of patients at the gravest stages of illness. Along with his best friend and partner in medicine, Dr. Arthur Capellini, Peter does his best to survive the program and maintain his sanity amidst the overwhelming sickness, death, and personal sleep deprivation inherent to the program. At the beginning of his third and final year of training, just when he thought he was accustomed to it all, Peter is faced with an unexpected tragedy: the serious illness of a highly respected colleague. Upon his colleagues request, Peter accepts the responsibility of caring for him in the hospital. Ultimately, when the case turns sour, the final decision regarding life or death is left in Peters hands. County is the story of one mans personal evolution in the medical profession, from naive medical student to experienced physician. It is an accurate account of medicine residency that portrays doctors as true human beings, sometimes flawed in their judgment and character, always tested by the ominous presence of disease. County depicts death as it affects us all, while at the same time revealing the human bonds which keep death from consuming the living.
