

A young boy of natural ability with a long bow is confronted with his destiny from a distant past, as he has to face overwhelming odds. With a close group of friends, he tries to unite a Britain torn apart by the deadly virus the red death. Set in the future of 2038, in a world that is changing, he sets out on a journey filled with the surprises of a mystical past, as everyone around him discovers talents that they were unaware of. This is a thought provoking and at times humorous tale with some very heart warming moments. It has a contemporary feel that highlights many issues of life today, and the links we all hold to our past. This book will leave you thinking long after the book has been put down. A thrilling adventure ideally suited for teenagers and the older reader of Fantasy and Adventure stories. Part one of an ongoing series of related stories by author Robin John Morgan.
