

Many Baby Boomers reaching the age of retirement have thought of moving to a foreign countries such as Mexico and other third world countries. The question they tend to ask themselves is; What do I need to know and how do I prepare for such a transition? The author and his wife made such a move to Baja, Mexico in 2011 and Mr. Crimmel has documented the move in his new book, Learning to Love the Peso. The book includes the index reference so the reader can target the areas of need including items such as banking, telephones and the internet. The book is a humorous account of the authors transition and it was written on a daily basis covering all the obstacles encountered along the way. The author also covers the mis-information presented by the news media regarding violence in Mexico and presents a clearer picture of life in the country to the south. The book is a must read for those wanting to visit Mexico or another third world country and for those thinking of making a more permanent move in their retirement years.
