

In the spring of 2015 I had the honor of teaching 33 students in the University of California Berkeley-Extension, International Diploma Program. These exceptional international students came from all over the world to learn about how business was done in Silicon Valley. My goal was to teach them about entrepreneurial leadership. Having led entrepreneurial companies since my late 20s, I felt I was positioned to give them a strong toolset to use in their careers. But leadership is a quality that is elusive and difficult to define. Many who think they are leaders are not and some lead without even knowing it. I challenged the students to find one leader from their home country, and one in Silicon Valley, who they admired. I asked them to describe a problem the leader faced and how that leader overcame the problem. The responses I got back were varied but I soon saw that, regardless of the location or size of business, leaders around the world face similar sets of problems. This book highlights the best profiles. The goal of this book is to help current and future business learn from the strategies the leaders profiled in this book used to deal with the challenges they faced. Hopefully, this will spark ideas and help the readers navigate successfully through their own problems. Amazon only allowed 10 listed authors.
