

Sean O'Connell's life is perfect, or it was until his partying lifestyle affected his bull riding. Now he's ended the season too broke to leave the Northwest for the warm southern rodeos. When a wild night with his buddies gets out of hand, he wakes up naked, staring into the angry eyes of a strange woman. His infallible O'Connell charm gets him nowhere with the dark-haired beauty. It's obvious she's not his usual good-time girl, so why can't he forget her? Bar-manager Catherine Silvera finds a waterlogged, unconscious cowboy freezing to death in front of the Sugarwater Bar. She saves his life--then runs faster than a jackrabbit with a coyote on its tail. Any man who makes his living rodeoing is bad news, especially if he thinks partying is part of the competition. He's everything she doesn't want in a man, so why can't she shake her attraction to the rugged cowboy?
