Not illustrated. 1818 Excerpt: ...the peninsula to Breechan Island, as a fine station for a view. The peninsula itself he considers as very fine: to the s., see Mangerton and Turk mountains in all their glory, sinking down to the rugged point at the Eagles Nest, where there is a view of Glenaa, the immediate fore-ground being filled up with Breechan and Dynes Islands, beyond which is seen the Lower Lake, with Ross Castle, whilst the distance is completed by the town of Killarney, and the island of In. nisfallen. The Upper Lake he describes as an immense reservoir. Scervoir, in a hollow between stupendous mountains, the rugged, rocky, and almost perpendicular sides of which may be said to overhang the water, whilst the whole scenery is of the most awful and extraordinary kind, such as very seldom occurs, and on a scale of magnificence hardly to be equalled any where else, except in the wildest districts of Switzerland. Sir R. C. Hoare observes, that the collected beauties of this favoured spot are so great, so varied, and so superior to any thing that he had ever seen in Italy, Switzerland, or England, that to delineate or describe them he felt impossible. His route was to embark at Ross Castle, then stretch across to Innisfallen and see ruins of Abbey thickly embosomed in wood; thence in a westerly direction to OSullivan's Cascade, (inely disposed in a thick forest, whence he coasted under Tomies mountain, where the view opens magnificently at Glenaa Point, where see the cottage. From thence to Turks Lake under Brickeen bridge. See Turks Mountain, majestic and perpendicular. Back to Glenaa Cottage to dine, and return to Killarney. On the following day proceed to Mucruss; ruins of Abbey: eminence in park, with bewitching view of Mucruss, Lower Lake, and distant mountains, a most ex...
