Not illustrated. 1917 Excerpt: ...there can be no doubt that the kidney is at fault. If a hydronephrosis, a pyonephrosis, or an adherent organ is discovered, here is a pathological condition demanding treatment. Then there are the tender kidneys and those cases whose symptoms are temporarily relieved by rest and reposition of the displaced organ. These form a doubtful class, and merit the most minute examination and the closest watching, of which the palliative treatment of the disease forms an important part. The majority of them are complicated by some neurotic tendency, enteroptosis, or gastro-intestinal or pelvic disease. Their judicious treatment is peculiarly difficult. Finally, there are the cases in which no test can show a direct connection between the renal ptosis and the symptoms. TREATMENT In deciding upon the proper course of treatment for any individual case of movable kidney, the surgeon must bear in mind the following facts: 1. In many cases nephroptosis produces no symptoms. 2. In many instances nephropexy, while it retains the kidney in place (which it does not always do), either fails to relieve or aggravates the neurotic or dyspeptic symptoms attributed to renal mobility. In view of these facts we must hesitate to elect nephropexy, a treatment which, though surgically a success, may prove clinically a failure, or worse than a failure. Mechanical treatment--supporting the kidney by a suitable belt--may always be experimentally employed in doubtful cases. But to have recourse to surgery is a grave matter. Not because of the danger or discomfort connected with the operation, for the former is almost nil, the latter inconsiderable, but because in most instances the patient is distinctly neurotic, and, while the influence of the opera 1 An exhaustive review has been publishe...
