

When I leave and you are left is a book to help you organize your personal affairs. The book provides space for information on bank accounts, insurance policies, investments, wills and other legal documents, contact information for family and friends, funeral preferences and a list of who gets what (jewelery, china, sports equipment etc.) and also any hidden cash. A reason for a written record of financial papers, insurance policies and tax returns is that many families live far apart. Another reason for this type of documentation is to avoid family rifts. When you are sorting out possessions, some people get territorial. It is the small things that cause hassles after a death in the family.
